

Hearing Loss Clinic

Answers to common questions about a visit to the Hearing Loss Clinic

What is Hearing Loss Clinic?

Hearing Loss Clinic is for children with issues related to hearing loss. Experts from a number of areas work together to assist children and their families.

What are the goals of Hearing Loss Clinic?

- Identify the cause of hearing loss, if possible.
- Provide support, education and guidance to access technology that may help.
- Provide information about early intervention and school services.
- Assess the emotional and behavioral needs of patients and families.
- Address concerns about growth and development and hearing loss.

Many families find Hearing Loss Clinic helpful after a new diagnosis of hearing loss. Families may also find it helpful during major transition periods for the child and/or family.

Who are the providers?

Audiologist — measures your child's hearing levels. This may be done with or without hearing aids. Hearing aids and FM systems may be discussed.

Aural Habilitation Specialist — assesses speech and language skills in children with hearing loss.

Mental Health Counselor — can assess the social and emotional well-being of the child. A referral will be made, if needed.

Educator — helps families address questions or concerns about school services in the context of hearing loss.

Genetic Counselor — collects family history information and obtains medical and hearing history of the child. Genetic testing may be recommended.

Developmental Pediatrician — consults when there are concerns, in addition to hearing loss, about the child's development.

Otolaryngology Provider (Ear, nose and throat doctor or nurse practitioner) — reviews patient history and examines your child. They can order tests to help identify the cause of hearing loss. Test results and X-rays will be reviewed.
