

Chris Feudtner, MD, PhD, MPH

Chris Feudtner, MD PhD MPH, is a Professor of Pediatrics, Medical Ethics and Health Policy at The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP) and the University of Pennsylvania Perelman School of Medicine who focuses on improving the lives of children with complex chronic conditions and their families.

Chris is the Director of the Department of Medical Ethics at CHOP, and holds the Steven D. Handler Endowed Chair of Medical Ethics at CHOP, where he is also an attending physician and director of research for the Pediatric Advance Care Team (which provides palliative, end-of-life, and bereavement services) and the Integrated Care Service (which cares for hospitalized children with chronic conditions and technology-dependent health care needs). He has published over 200 articles and chapters regarding pediatric palliative care, epidemiology, health service use and quality, child outcomes, and medical ethics, with funding from the Agency for Healthcare Quality and Research, the National Institutes of Health, and the National Library of Medicine.

As a historian of medicine, Chris authored a book on the history of diabetes in America, entitled Bittersweet: Diabetes, Insulin, and the Transformation of Illness (University of North Carolina Press, 2003). Chris's teaching, mentoring, and scholarly accomplishments have been recognized by the Stanley Stamm Role Model in Medicine Award (2000), The Class of 1990 David Cornfeld Bedside Teaching Award (2005), The Leonard Tow Humanism Award (2011), the Samuel Martin Health Evaluation Sciences Research Award (2011), the CHOP Mentor Award (2012), the Hastings Center Cunniff-Dixon Physician Award (2014), and appointment at a Hastings Center Fellow. He lives outside of Philadelphia with his wife (a family physician), three children, and two dogs.
